

The Saint Omer Foundation for Transatlantic Values presents its fifth Summer Masterclass:

Citizenship, commitment and values

How to regenerate democracy, in the digital age, through citizen governance based on humanistic values inherited of a common history between France and the United-States, and how to foster citizen-inspired entrepreneurship ?

July 3rd – July 6th 2023

(11:30 am EDT/ 5:30 pm CEST) (11:30 heure américaine/17h30 heure française)

- The Saint Omer Foundation for Transatlantic Values welcomes students, professionals, Friends of the Foundation, and external auditors alike to its fourth Summer Masterclass!
- This summer's theme, "Citizenship, commitment and values" In line with the ESG principles (Environmental, Social and Governance) the idea is to work on "governance" meaning highlighting individuals' responsibilities in key areas. Enlarging the notion of individuals at the society level we shall address them as "citizens". The theme will be presented through the lens of three sets of issues:
  - Humanism & citizen governance to regenerate democracy,
  - How does/can governance foster citizen-inspired entrepreneurship ?
  - How to redefine citizenship in the digital age ?
- The Masterclass will meet for three 150-minute sessions between Juily 3rd and 6th giving participants the opportunity to learn from speakers from a variety of backgrounds. Students from Georgetown University and other American universities will be joined by students from French universities such as Sciences Po, among others.

Upon completion of the Masterclass, students will receive a certificate from the Saint Omer Foundation inaugurating them into the 2023 Young Ambassadors for Societal Excellence generation (YASE).

Introducing the 2023 theme: "Citizenship, commitment and values"

- The Saint Omer Foundation welcomes students from around the globe to join the next generation of Young Ambassadors for Societal Excellence (YASE) through the completion of our Masterclass. The goal of the conference is to continue a tradition that began almost 300 years ago in Saint-Omer: the dissemination of humanist values to generations of French and American students with the aim that they use these values to pursue the Common Good.
- Who are we ? Shared values create our identity. American society was built around the primacy of production, Man, motor, measured by its economic success. For Europeans, these values are defined in Article 2 of the Lisbon Treaty: human dignity, minority rights, pluralism, non-discrimination, tolerance, justice, solidarity, equality. But these values go beyond the legal definition of a treaty. They result from this convergence, the fruit of 2,000 years of history. These values are also those of humanism. Man at the center and "raison d'être" of our concentric circles of life in society.
- Humanism is the source of collective arbitration, of decisions to be taken at each level from the bottom up, principle of subsidiarity. These values are not an abstraction. They forge our social and economic model, which some call «old Europe»: it is our social market economy, it is tomorrow this dynamic of the conception of a new capitalism, this is the meaning found through the production and distribution processes, this is what is embodied in the ESG principles.
- But these values and identities are fragile. It is a struggle of every moment, a responsible fight that involves finding the right level of arbitration, with the risk of acting in contradiction with these values, of discrediting them, of losing our identity, of reinforcing alternative models: it is the crisis of democracies that we are experiencing.
- Our seminar focuses on how to regenerate democracy, in the digital age, through citizen governance based on humanistic values inherited of a common history between France and the United-States, and how to foster citizen-inspired entrepreneurship ?

Topic 3 – Collective governance : society & politics

Premise

The theme will be about the collective governance of the society, politics in democracies at a moment of our history were most of the ideas received and discussed by the American founding fathers and by the siècle des Lumiere's' actors are contested and perceived to be decadent? What does humanism mean today in political decision making? Last year Nathalie highlighted the fact that only the extremes are militants and devote time and energy to promote their ideas. In the middle, common sense seems a natural given necessitating no action no faith! What would be a process to address a complex reality avoiding simplistic (populism) approaches? What could be the role of the "elite" to intermediate societal complexity by explaining and simplifying it in a way to reach each level of understanding.
